Areas of the PhD Programme: The course is divided into 2 curricula: Labor, Development and Innovation and Industry 4.0

The Work, Development and Innovation curriculum will train in the understanding and governance of labor relations and processes of socio-economic change by focusing on the main regulatory planes (law, management, economics and organization) and levels of analysis involved (micro-the individual work situations; meso-the organization as a whole; macro- the relationships with organizations, institutions and external stakeholders), developing research tools and interdisciplinary modes of intervention suitable for jointly thematizing the regulation, legal and non-legal, of work, the processes of business innovation (industrial, service, public) and the dynamics of economic and territorial development.

The Industry 4.0 curriculum will train in the understanding of the dynamics of the digital transformation of organizations and the elaboration of legal, economic-financial and managerial tools to govern the transformation of enterprises under Industry 4.0. The research path privileges the aspect of datafication of work and production processes, consequent to digitalization, and having important transformative effects. The coordination, in the E4E School, with the doctoral courses: "Enzo Ferrari" in Industrial and Territorial Engineering, in Information and Communication Technologies, in Industrial Innovation Engineering and in Civil, Environmental and Materials Engineering will increase interdisciplinarity with training activities on the main technologies and technological trajectories in Industry 4.0.

Both curricula address the research areas found at the dedicated web address: <https://www.phdlavorosviluppoinnovazione.unimore.it/en/research-areas/>

Official languages: Italian and English. Please refer to the educational programme of the course for details on the languages used in each course: <https://www.phdlavorosviluppoinnovazione.unimore.it/en/homepage-english/>
